Ravelstein is Saul Bellow's final novel. Published in 2000, when Bellow was eighty-five years old, it received widespread critical acclaim. It tells the tale of a friendship between a university professor and a writer, and the complications that animate their erotic and intellectual attachments in the face of impending death. The novel is a

Ravelstein - Wikipedia

Ravelstein is a compelling hero - a big, lumbering, intellectual gay powerhouse of a man, admired by all, rich from his intellect, a great friend and flawed beyond even Bellow's description. But it is 'Chick' (Bellow) who is the real protagonist of Ravelstein. Both men face death, one succumbs, the other, overcomes.

"Ravelstein" (2000) is a novel-memoir of the friendship between Allan Bloom and the author, Saul Bellow. In addition to exploring the friendship of the two men, the book's primary themes, to me, are the nature of love and the necessity of facing death, one's own and those dear to one.

Ravelstein by Saul Bellow - Goodreads

Ravelstein (2000) was Saul Bellow's last novel. It follows a pattern established by his earlier work, Humboldt's Gift (1975) in being a fictional character sketch based on one of his real-life friends.

"Ravelstein(...)" is full of heart and wisdom, and I want to praise it without a pinch of qualification. If this is overpraising it, so be it. The writer, well into his eighties, has hit his number again. He is Bellow, doing the Bellow thing: He is paying homage to greatness of spirit, to the Blakean energy principle."

Abe Ravelstein IS the American mind and Bellow its finest living (thank God) voice. John Sutherland, Sunday Times Bellow's return with RAVELSTEIN to an earlier, freer, more voice-driven exuberance is an astonishment to me. I have to keep reminding myself that Ravelstein suggests in turn that Chick write a memoir or a life of him, and during the course of a celebratory trip to Paris the two share thoughts on mortality, philosophy and history, loves and friends, old and new, and vaudeville routines from the remote past. The mood turns more somber once they have returned to the Midwest and Ravelstein succumbs to AIDS and Chick himself nearly dies.

Ravelstein also spends lavishly on his boyfriend, Nikki, a princely young Singaporean. Chick's wife, at the beginning of the memoir, is Vela, an East European physicist. Ravelstein dislikes her, and suspects that her Balkan friends are anti-Semites. Eventually, Vela kicks Chick out of his house and divorces him (fans will not be surprised that Bellow, as seems to be his habit, makes this a ...
